Ecole Superieure Libre des Sciences Commerciales Appliquees (ESLSCA)

Founded in 1949, ESLSCA has graduates who now occupy senior position in France and around the world. The Academic Board of the ESLSCA-BBA program takes pride in offering the American method of education based on personal attention and active classroom interaction. This program creates a learning environment that blends theoretical knowledge with professional practice, and fosters an understanding and appreciation of diversity in light of today’s fast-changing world.

Located on Paris’s Left Bank, near “Les Invalides” and the Eiffel Tower, ESLSCA is easily accessible by several metro lines. Paris itself is a “moveable” feast, from the world headquarters of the OECD and the “Paris Club” of international banking to the headquarters of European Business, to an unmatched cultural life.

Housing & Orientation:

ESLSCA is a commuter campus so there are no dorms on campus. Partners at ESLSCA will place students in appropriate off-campus housing.

Since housing is in high demand in Paris, most universities do not have dormitories. Paris has what is called “Foyer’s” which is like a dormitory owned by a third party. Only university students are allowed to live in the “Foyer”.

Life in Paris:

Paris probably has more familiar landmarks than any other city in the world. As a result, first-time visitors often arrive in the French capital with all sorts of expectations: of grand vistas, of intellectuals discussing weighty matters in cafés, of romance along the Seine, of nightclub revues, of rude people who won’t speak English.

If you look hard enough, one can probably find all of those. But another approach is to set aside the preconceptions of Paris and to explore the city’s avenues and backstreets as if the tip of the Eiffel Tower or the spire of Notre Dame wasn’t about to pop into view at any moment.

With buses, subways and trains at your fingertips one can not only explore Paris but can also explore Europe.
